SHORT NOTE

THE FIRST OCCURRENCE OF THE YELLOW-BILLED SPOONBILL (Platalea flavipes) IN NEW ZEALAND

On 23 August 1976, I sighted a group of four waders at Rangaunu Harbour, Kaitaia. I was immediately able to identify three of the birds as a White Ibis (Threskiornis molucca) and two Royal Spoonbills (Platalea leucorodia), but the fourth, though obviously a Spoonbill, was larger and had distinctive yellow legs, feet and bill. The Spoonbills were feeding vigorously in the shallows on the mud-flats, sometimes venturing out into water 45-50 cm in depth. On occasion these three birds would form into a line and work along the shoreline with typical sideways movements of their bills.

After consultation with a colleague, and reference to Frith 1969 (Birds in the Australian high country. Reed) and Slater 1970 (A field guide to Australian birds. Rigby), I realised that the unusual Spoonbill was, in fact, a Yellow-billed Spoonbill (Platalea flavipes).

In its native Australia, the species ranges throughout most of the continent, with the exception of the south-west and Tasmania, frequenting swamps, shallow lakes, rivers and dams.

This, however, would appear to be the first record of a Yellow-billed Spoonbill in New Zealand and outside of continental Australia (Condon 1975, Checklist of the birds of Australia. RAOU).
