

NIGHT SINGING OF SHINING CUCKOO.—During the early months of summer a shining cuckoo sang in our garden a great deal during the day, both the long upward notes and downward notes; but at one stage it also decided to keep us awake at night with its call (usually the upward notes only). We first noticed this night singing on November 4. It ceased about November 23. On the evening of November 10, about 11.30 o'clock, I counted 54 continuous calls of the upward note and about five minutes later 32 were repeated.—Noelle Macdonald, Howick.

HABITS OF LESSER REDPOLL in the Wellington Peninsula.—Corrections, p. 64: For the word "colonies" read "territories"; for the word "irruption," paragraph 2, read "eruption."—H. L. Secker.

LITTLE BLUE PENGUIN FEEDING.—From a convenient jetty an excellent view was obtained of a little blue penguin feeding on some very small fish. From a resting place under the jetty it darted out and made a circle about 20 yards in diameter, keeping a little under the surface. Smaller and smaller circles were made, all in the one operation, until the small fish were herded into a tight circular dark pack three feet across. The penguin then drove through the pack and surfaced. Heads and tails protruded from its bill. These were quickly swallowed and it rounded up the fish pack again before it could disperse, driving through and surfacing again up to 10 or 15 times before seeking another rest under the jetty. The whole operation was repeated several times. The speed of the bird under the water was remarkable. This method of feeding is probably not uncommon. Other people at Whangaroa, not having the advantage of a jetty, had reported a "tortoise," which put its head out of the water. The "tortoise" was probably the rounded dark mass of fish and the penguin, when surfacing at the end of its charge through the fish, was taken for its head.—T. M. Roberts, Whangaroa.
